

Ideas for Brick and Sets

Before you buy, do you have any old brick sets that you (or your kids) aren't going to use anymore? You can use one for the set needed or you can take the set apart and those can be a great source of loose brick pieces.

Do your kids or family members have some bricks they might be willing to loan you?

- Most superstores and grocery stores carry bricks and sets in their toy section. Of course, any toy store.
- Ebay: <http://www.ebay.com/> & Goodwill Online: <https://www.shopgoodwill.com>
Just type in bricks, LEGO®, lot, and you will see they sell them by the pound.
- The LEGO® Store: <https://www.lego.com/en-us/stores/stores> to see if there is one near you
They usually have a brick wall and you can fill a container with whatever pieces you like.
- The LEGO® Shop online: <https://shop.lego.com/>
They sell Creative Brick Boxes of different sizes which could be a good starter amount.
- Amazon or any other online retailers you like: www.amazon.com

Example of Loose Brick vs. A Set with Instructions

